Deep Winter Catskills Adventure Trip Report: We had a trip that was challenging and will not be forgotten for a long time. We climbed 2500 feet to the summit of a 3800 foot mtn. Had a bunch of cliffs to work our way through around the ice. There was at least a foot or more of snow at the summit. The warm snow was melting during the day, we hiked warmly on the climb, most had the right boots. Around 3 the rain started and we had a long, long, very long, slog out that was tricky with the rising water on the trails. It turned to snow at 5 and we were out of the woods by 6 (in the dark using night vision - no flashlights needed!). The roads were a bit slick but it was a short ride back up "Boy Scout Road" to the cabin. The camp has a newly constructed restrooms and showers which was a nice addition. That night there was a feast that couldn't be beat. The wind howled and whipped all night long and we awoke to 9 degrees of wonderful winter weather. Great trip!
